We were then detached from our brigade, and the general impression was that we would not be called to duty until the

YANKEE HUMILIATION AND CONFESION OF COWARDICE.—The Yankees are very sore over their reverse at Galveston. Some of their papers term it even "dishonorable."—The Baltimore American publishes the following extract from the letter of "one who participated in the engagement, and manfully strove to produce a different result."

* Admiral Farragut has ordered a court of inquiry on the affair. He pronounces the affair in every the most disgraceful thing of the war.

In reference to the cowardice shown by the commanders of gunboats, the writer says:

"I could not get them to send in to bring off our wounded, who could be seen lying on the deck, and the rebels would have been glad to have had them off their hands; not even to send in to learn whether our men were dead or alive; and we did not know, on any guess or surmise what was done or who were lost or who were saved."

The Massachusetts men fought bravely, and the record will be in their praise but they might as well have been put in Richmond, 275 alone, as to put them in Galveston, with bridges open and the railroad running across daily trains of rebel soldiers from Houston and above.

We lost 175 killed wounded or prisoners of the Massachusetts 42d. Of the whole crew of the Harriet Lane, 131, probably but a very small number were left alive, say from ten to twenty and only one officer.—From ten to twenty of the crew and officers of the Westfield were lost. We lost the Harriet Lane in good condition, and ready for sea, two barks loaded with coal. The rebels had about 3,000 men, under Gen. Magruder, six or seven rams and gunboats, of no great strength, and five or six pieces of artillery on shore.

SAD CALAMITY.

On Thursday morning of the 5th instant at about 4 o'clock a pine tree blew down in the cavalry camp, killing two white men W. J. Locke, and Jas. M. Nunnally, instantly; also a negro boy belonging to David Howard, all of Dallas County. The Surgeon of the squadron, Dr. Erwin of Dallas, Jas. M. Hale and David Franklin of Blount were badly but not mortally wounded. The remains of Messrs Locke and Nunnally were sent home to their friends.

Talladega Watchtower.

An editor of a Western paper while taking a snooze after dark, traveling in a railway carriage, had his pocket picked.—The thief next day forwarded the pocket book, by express, to the editor's office with the following note:

"You mizzelbal skunk, hears yer pocket buk. I don't kepe no sich. For a man drest as well as you to go around with a wallet with nuthin in it but a lot of noose paper scraps, an ivory tooth comb, two noose paper stamps, an pass from a railroad director, is a contemptible impersonation on the public. As I here ye air a editor, I return yer trash—I never robs any old gentleman."

GOOD.

The latest advices from New Orleans represent the Abolition army there as greatly demoralized, and Banks as having said his army had "gone to hell, and there was no use denying it." The Macon Telegraph upon this remarks that his army had gone into winter quarters.

POETRY.

From the Houston [Tex] Telegraph.

"Why I Love that Song."

They ask me why I love to sing That little song so well? For it always limes my lids with tears, Like spray-drops in a shell.

I cannot tell them how it wakes Sweet echoes from the past; Each time so low, so trembling, That I fear it is the last.

And amid these echoes from the past; Three voices—all too sweet for earth— And Heaven is their home.

God lent the cherub brothers three, But Angels with us vied; And wooed the lady-wanderers home, Just when we thought they died.

And though their little shiny heads Are not our Mother's' breast, I never think of them as dead, But only gone to rest.

This song, too, minds me of a hope, But just as Autumn tined his harp, It perished with the flowers.

Yet with my song it comes again, And seems of life a part; That hope I shrouded long ago, And buried in my heart.

That little song is from the past, And ever breathes to me Of other days, as little shell Sing ever to the sea.

Kentucky's Fighting Men

A Chicago paper in remonstrating against Lincoln's Emancipation Proclamation, and showing that its effect would be to place Kentucky on the side of the Confederate States, furnishes us with an estimate of Kentucky's fighting men, which we publish:

"I am not informed as to the military strength of Tennessee. But Kentucky has a fighting population of 139,000 men. Of these 40,000 are already in the Confederate army. In the Union army there are forty-two regiments of Kentucky infantry and 14 regiments of Kentucky cavalry, amounting probably to 50,000 men in all.—Will it be a slight thing not only to lose these 50,000 troops with their guns and horses, but a so to see them arrayed in the ranks of our enemies?"

Illinois on Lincoln and the War.

Hon. Wm. A. Richardson has been elected to the U. S. Senate in Illinois.

The Washington Chronicle says he is to be judged by the resolutions of the caucus which nominated him, an abstract of which we publish:

Second, that the administration, in suspending the writ of Habeas Corpus, in arresting private citizens and incarcerating them in bastilles, issuing the proclamation of emancipation, and in other instances usurping power has violated the Constitution, infringed upon State sovereignty, and disregarded the popular wish. Its perversion of the war into a war of Abolitionism, deserves our unqualified disapprobation, and justifies entitles it to the condemnation of all true lovers of constitutional liberty and State rights.

Fifth, that peace, fraternal relations, and political fellowship should be restored among the people of the States, that the best interests of all and the welfare of mankind, demand this should be done in the speediest and most effective manner.

Seventh.—Favors a national convention of all the States at Louisville, Ky., at the earliest practicable period, to adjust our national difficulties.

Eighth.—Recommends that the Legislature now in session, appoint commissioners to said national convention, and invite other States to do so.

Ninth.—That we earnestly recommend a cessation of hostilities for such periods to allow the people of the North and South to express, through a national convention, their wish for peace and maintenance of the Union as it was under the Constitution as it is.

Mr. Daniel Chandler, of Mobile, has suggested a plan for paying our national debt off without taxation. He is a financier of acknowledged ability, and was earnestly recommended by the people of his section as a suitable person to fill the office of Secretary of Treasury. He has written a good deal on the subject of the currency since the war commenced, and his views have attracted considerable attention. His plan for paying the national debt has recently at the request of a Committee of leading men of Mississippi, been submitted to the public, and is briefly as follows:

1. That the Constitution be so amended as to make Confederate notes a legal tender, and that the national debt be funded.

2. That the Government shall become the purchaser of the entire cotton crop not for one year only, but for a series of years—paying the planter therefor a fixed and uniform price.

That the Government, being the absolute owner of the entire crop, and having undisputed control of the same, can dictate the price, and thus virtually make the world pay our debts.

4. That a heavy import duty be levied upon every bag shipped on private account, so as to give the Government the exclusive monopoly of the trade.

5. That cotton, even at fifty cents per pound, is known to be the cheapest article for clothing purposes that has yet been discovered, and the present war has demonstrated that the world must and will have it, even at that price, though it might be policy to sell it for less.

6. That the Government shall guarantee to the planter twelve cents for his cotton, and then by selling it for even double that price, (more can be had,) the cotton crop, not only pay off the national debt in five years, but provide a fund out of which a navy may be built in the meantime and persons reimbursed for individual losses growing out of the war.

OBITUARY.

DIED.—In Jacksonville, Ala. Jan. 31st, after a painful illness, Mrs. Martha O. relict of Aaron Cantrell, in the 52d year of her age.

The deceased was distinguished for energy of character and unwavering attention to the various duties of life. She was a warm friend, an affectionate mother and earnest Christian. She had been for more than 30 years a member of the Presbyterian Church, and her place in the house of God was seldom vacant. It pleased the Lord in her last moments to deny her the privilege of speaking to her children and friends, but they mourn not as those without hope.

The integrity of a Christian profession for many years, give great grounds of belief that she has gained an unfading crown.

Four children, (two of them now in the Confederate army,) are left with other relatives and friends to mourn her departure. May they find strength and consolation in Him who is the friend of the orphan, and the All in All to his people.

F.

In Bed Company.—One of our editors, says the Murfreesboro Banner, went to the battle-field on Wednesday in search of glory and items. While following up the charge of Gen. McCown's division, he met a body of prisoners moving to the rear, and intent upon animating at once struck up a conversation with them. Unfortunately for him he was dressed in civilian habiliments, and upon attempting to leave was ordered to remain where was. With a smile of ineffable contempt, he drew from his pocket a pass, but what was his elation when he was accosted with, "I say my boy, none of us can read; but that that trick's too old, and I'll tell you another thing, yer dam blue bellied Yankee, if you try any
